WHAT TRAP NEST DOES FOR POULTRY MAN

Showing How the Trap Nest Works.

(By J. A. BICKERDIKE.) It shows which hen lays the eggs. It picks out the 300-egg hen, the 200-egg, the 100-egg, the 50-egg and the drone. Feeding the drone is one of the greatest leaks of the poultry man.

It picks out the winter layer. It enables one to get acquainted with each individual hen.

The frequent handling and moving the hen from the nest tames her and the tame hen is a paying hen.

It prevents egg eating, as the culprit is easily detected and killed.

It picks out the hen that lays the infertile egg, the brown, the white and the yellow egg.

It picks out the hen that raises the best chicks. Not always the highest scoring hen raises the winning chicks.

It is the only practical way that a breeder can pedigree his stock. Poultry will in time be pedigreed as is other thoroughbred stock. Trap nests may be placed in a building or yard, away from the laying hens (when used for sitting hens), and they can be removed once a day for feed and water. When they return to the nest they shut themselves in and the other hens out, so they cannot crowd on and break the eggs.

The trap nest is a simple contrivance by which the door is set on a trigger, which is sprung by the hen when she enters. The door closes and she cannot leave the nest until removed by hand.

A numbered band on each hen's leg enables the owner to tell exactly what each hen is doing by writing her number on the eggs in the trap nest.

DRAG AND HARROW COMBINED

One of Most Useful Implements on Any Farm—Illustration Gives Idea of Construction.

(By J. WESLEY GRIFFIN.) This is one of the most useful implements we have on the farm and can be made with very little cost. The accompanying cut will give you an idea of the construction. Any material at hand may be used.

Drag and Harrow Combined.

but I find the following to be about the right proportion for a two-horse team:

One piece 2x8, six feet long—any tough wood; this is for harrow frame. Two pieces 2x3, five feet long, to attach to drag the harrow.

Two pieces 2x6, five feet long—joists of drag.

Four pieces 1x12 and two pieces 1x8, six feet long, nailed to joists, as shown in cut.

The harrow frame is fastened to the joists by two staples made of five-eighths-inch round iron, as shown in the cut. This allows the harrow to pass over any stone or little stump without injury.

The hitchers are made with a piece of chain or wire run through the joists and end board, as illustrated. The construction of this implement may be changed to suit material on hand and the ideas of the maker. Try one and you will never be without one.

"Swat" the Fly.

The fly is a nuisance of the worst kind. It breeds in filth and spreads disease in a great many ways. If the barnyard manure can be removed and the barn kept clean and in a sanitary condition there will be fewer flies, and as a result there will be less typhoid fever and other diseases which are carried by this insect.

Heavy Drafters.

Heavy drafters may be produced from any of the following breeds: Percherons, Belgians, Clydesdales, and Shires.
